Division Community Access to Recovery
Services (CARS)

SAMHSA has identified four major dimensions that support a life in recovery:

- Health—overcoming or managing one’s mental health and/or substance use condition (s) or symptoms. For everyone in recovery, this means making informed, healthy choices that support physical and emotional well-being
- Home—having a stable and safe place to live
- Purpose— participating in meaningful daily activities, such as a work, school volunteering, taking care of family, or creative projects. Developing independence, income, and resources that help someone be a part of society.
- Community—having relationships and social networks that provide support, friendship, love, and hope

How Can CCS Help?

CCS is a voluntary Medicaid program designed with the intention to help individuals coping with mental health, emotional disturbances and / or substance use disorders recover from their conditions and attain the lives that they desire.

What Does CCS Offer?

CCS is a program that serves both adults and children. Every individual who participates in CCS works with a care coordinator to design a recovery plan that is intended to help build the skills needed to improve health, promote wellness, attain personal goals and enhance overall quality of life.

Is CCS the Right Program for Me or My Child?

- ✓ Do you, or your child have Medicaid?
- ✓ Are you or your child coping with a mental health, emotional disturbance, or substance use disorder (or a combination)?
- ✓ Do you or your family (for children) want help?
- ✓ Are you or your family ready to work with someone to develop a plan, and actively participate in the goals and services selected?

If you answered “YES” to the previous questions, CCS may be the right program for you.
