By achieving racial equity, Milwaukee is the healthiest county in Wisconsin.

MILWAUKEE COUNTY VISION STATEMENT

Overview

Racism has been and is a public health crisis in Milwaukee County. According to the County Health Rankings, Milwaukee County has consistently been, one of the lowest-ranked counties for health in Wisconsin and, according to Federal Reserve Economic Data, Milwaukee County is one of our nation's most racially segregated areas.

According to 2019 statistics, a white person lives, on average, nearly 14 years longer than a black person and the infant mortality rate is nearly three (3) times higher for black infants compared to white infants. Race is a social construction with no biologic basis, yet racism may produce an assigned societal value based on the way a person looks that has resulted in race being a consistent predictor of a person's quality and length of life.

Racism (not race) is a leading indicator of health because it structures access to opportunity like housing, education, employment, food, safety, and care. When access to opportunity is structured unequally, health outcomes follow that pattern. Other forms of oppression (i.e., ableism, sexism, etc.) operate through similar pathways, and when they intersect with racism, the impact on health compounds.

When we examine and correct the structural barriers created by racism, such as inequitable housing policy, underinvestment in neighborhoods, food apartheid, or unequal access to capital, we are also strengthening the infrastructure that also affects women, people with disabilities, older adults, Veterans, immigrants, and others who face systemic barriers in Milwaukee County.

The Racial Equity Budget Tool (REBT) enables departments to critically assess the impacts of budget decisions. The tool is structured around Milwaukee County's strategic focus areas to help departments and decision makers be better stewards of public resources.

Milwaukee County's Racial Equity Budget Tool (REBT) is designed to:

Make intentional connections between the strategic plan and the budget.

Use racial equity as the key guiding principle for important decisions regarding investments or disinvestments.

Initiate conversations on topics related to the three-year strategic objectives among department leaders and employees.

Provide baseline data on departmental efforts to inform enterprise-wide decisions.

Milwaukee County Strategic Focus Areas

In 2019, Milwaukee County launched its first strategic plan in 20 years. This plan explicitly recognizes that racism is a public health crisis and leads with the vision that: By achieving racial equity, Milwaukee is the healthiest county in Wisconsin.

As part of the strategic plan, Milwaukee County leaders have committed to use a racial equity budget tool to ensure resource allocations advance the strategic focus areas and vision. The questions in this budget tool were guided by the strategic plan and were informed by best practices from other jurisdictions and the Government Alliance on Race and Equity (GARE).

1. Create Intentional Inclusion

- Reflect the full diversity of Milwaukee County at every level of County government.
- Create and nurture an inclusive culture across the Milwaukee County government.
- Increase the number of Milwaukee County contracts awarded to minority- and women-owned business.

2. Bridge the Gap

- Determine what, where, and how we deliver services based on the resolution of health disparities.
- Break down silos across Milwaukee County government to maximize access to and quality of services offered.
- Apply a racial equity lens to all decisions.

3. Invest in Equity

- Invest “upstream” to address root causes of health disparities.
- Enhance Milwaukee County’s fiscal health and sustainability.
- Dismantle barriers to diverse and inclusive communities.

Instructions

1. Submit only one REBT per department.

The REBT should reflect an analysis of the suite of budget decisions per department. Within answers to each question, details may be provided at the division level, as determined appropriate. Decision points should be analyzed as part of the comprehensive effort that your department is undertaking in addressing racial equity in programs, plans, policies, and power structures. Since departments are often tasked with cutting their budgets to reflect a reduction from their previous fiscal year's budget, a REBT should also include an analysis of how proposed reductions may or may not burden Black and Brown individuals and communities.

2. Keep the focus on the analysis of departments' improvements, reductions, and overall budget.

The REBT will focus on a racial equity analysis of decisions for new policies, programs, and plans under consideration, and the department's ongoing commitment to racial equity.

3. Use demographic data to help your department determine benefits and burdens of new decisions and overall budget.

State and federally collected demographic data resources are provided in Appendix C. Departments are encouraged to use any data they collect on their service users throughout the completion of the REBT. Data from other relevant and credible sources a department may have is also acceptable.

4. REBT technical assistance information and opportunities.

If you have questions related to the 2027 REBT, please attend one of the Strategy, Budget and Performance Open Office hours and bring the questions. All persons who may be expected to assist the department director in completing the REBT will be encouraged to participate.

- If you understand the question, but have difficulty determining how to answer a question, please contact your Budget Analyst for assistance.
- The Office of Equity should only be contacted on questions related to the racial equity components (glossary, concepts, etc.) that are unclear and cannot be addressed by your Budget Analyst. Send correspondence via email to equityoffice@milwaukeecountywi.gov.

RACIAL EQUITY BUDGET TOOL

Department: DOT-Director's Office

Date Submitted: July 715, 2026

Please note: each response field below has a 2,500-character limit.

STRATEGIC FOCUS AREA 1: CREATE INTENTIONAL INCLUSION

1. What activities are you doing to attract and retain a diverse and inclusive workforce in your department? What are the associated costs of these activities?

In 2027, the Milwaukee County Department of Transportation (MCDOT) continues to strengthen its efforts to attract and retain a diverse and inclusive workforce. All divisions—excluding MCTS—work closely with Milwaukee County's Human Resources Recruitment Division to ensure equitable hiring practices and broad outreach to diverse applicant pools. Job postings are reviewed for clarity and accessibility, and interview panels are intentionally composed of diverse staff to minimize bias in candidate evaluation.

The Director's Office also leads departmentwide visibility and outreach efforts, supported by the Public Relations and Marketing position, to highlight career opportunities and promote MCDOT as an inclusive employer. Associated costs, including job posting fees, outreach materials, and diversity-focused recruitment efforts, are funded within each division's operating budget.

2. How do you use professional development and advancement opportunities to promote equity in your department's workforce? What resources are used to support these opportunities for professional development and advancement?

MCDOT continues to prioritize equitable access to professional development and advancement opportunities. The Director's Office works with division leadership to ensure that training resources, leadership development programs, and technical certifications are accessible to employees across all job classifications. Supervisors incorporate development planning into performance conversations, helping employees identify training needs and advancement goals.

The Public Relations and Marketing position supports internal communication to ensure employees are aware of available opportunities. Resources include County-sponsored training, tuition reimbursement, division-funded certifications, and staff time allocated for cross-training and mentorship. These efforts help ensure that employees—particularly those in entry-level and operational roles—have equitable pathways to career growth.

3. Our employees can be a great resource for innovation and knowing what is working well and what needs work. Have you engaged a diverse group of frontline employees to inform decisions about your proposed budget changes? If yes, how was input solicited, who was involved, and what were the results?

In 2027, MCDOT continues to engage frontline employees to inform operational priorities and budget decisions. Weekly Director's Office meetings and bi-monthly leadership sessions provide structured opportunities to discuss emerging needs and incorporate staff insights into planning. Divisions also convene small, cross-functional groups of frontline employees to gather feedback on service delivery, equipment needs, and workflow improvements.

The employee-centered newsletter, launched in 2025, remains a key tool for sharing information and soliciting feedback. Input gathered through these channels has informed staffing needs, equipment priorities, and process improvements, reinforcing MCDOT's commitment to inclusive and employee-centered decision-making.

4. Are you tracking contracts with minority and women-owned business? If yes, please share percentages of each. If no, why not?

MCDOT continues to support the tracking of minority- and women-owned business participation through collaboration with the Office of Economic Inclusion (OEI). OEI collects and reports Disadvantaged and Targeted Business Enterprise (DBE/TBE) data in alignment with County and federal requirements. As a recipient of federal transportation funding, MCDOT complies with U.S. Department of Transportation DBE program rules, including mandatory reporting on race-conscious and race-neutral participation.

The Director's Office monitors compliance and reviews progress toward participation goals. OEI maintains the official participation percentages, and the department defers to OEI for the most current data.

STRATEGIC FOCUS AREA 2: BRIDGE THE GAP

5. How and when have service users, in diverse and inclusive communities, and other key stakeholders been engaged to inform decisions about changes in funding levels for services provided in your requested budget (who was involved, what was the forum, what were the results)?

MCDOT continues to prioritize meaningful engagement with diverse service users to inform funding and service decisions. Staff from the Director's Office and all divisions participate in public meetings, town halls, and community forums across the County. These engagements provide insight into community needs related to infrastructure, safety, and transportation access, particularly in historically underserved neighborhoods.

A significant area of continued focus is Vision Zero. Public input has been instrumental in identifying high-risk locations and shaping strategies related to infrastructure improvements, enforcement, education, and equity-focused investments.

MCDOT views community engagement as an ongoing responsibility. Throughout 2027, the department continues to expand outreach methods to ensure that diverse voices—especially those most affected by transportation challenges—are included in discussions about funding and service delivery.

6. Describe ways in which demographic and economic data were used to prioritize resource distribution. (Data can include sources found in the resources section of this tool, department collected data, or any other relevant data from other sources.)

a. Please provide specific examples of data and how that influenced decision making.

b. Are there gaps in the data that need to be addressed to better understand disparities in equity?

MCDOT uses demographic and economic data from the U.S. Census Bureau, SEWRPC, and internal sources to guide equitable resource distribution. MCTS applies census tract-level data in Title VI equity analyses to ensure service and fare changes do not disproportionately impact low-income or minority riders. The Highway Maintenance Division uses demographic indicators to guide recruitment and prioritize maintenance in areas with infrastructure deficits.

Data gaps remain, including more granular information on disability status, limited English proficiency, neighborhood-level income, and non-motorized travel. MCDOT continues working with OEI, SEWRPC, and community partners to address these gaps and strengthen equity-focused decision-making.

7. a. How does your budget reflect efforts to work across departments to break down silos to maximize access to and quality of services offered?

b. How does this help us achieve the vision of achieving equity and health?

MCDOT prioritizes cross-departmental and intergovernmental collaboration to improve access to transportation services and enhance the quality of infrastructure across the County. Working beyond traditional departmental boundaries allows MCDOT to coordinate resources, align priorities, and deliver services more efficiently—particularly in communities that have historically experienced underinvestment.

A central example is the Vision Zero Project, which brings together municipal public works and planning departments, law enforcement agencies, elected officials, and community stakeholders to address reckless driving and multimodal safety across all 19 municipalities. Through shared data, coordinated funding strategies, and joint implementation of safety improvements, this collaboration supports safer streets and more equitable mobility options, especially in neighborhoods disproportionately impacted by traffic violence.

MCDOT also partners with the Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) to support transportation needs for the Housing First initiative, ensuring vulnerable residents can access emergency housing. In addition, the department works closely with the Milwaukee County Sheriff's Office (MCSO) and the Office of Emergency Management (OEM) to maintain critical fleet vehicles and support countywide response operations.

Transportation is deeply connected to housing stability, economic opportunity, healthcare access, and overall, well-being. MCDOT's collaborative approach, particularly its focus on safer streets and equitable service delivery—directly supports Milwaukee County's vision of achieving equity and health for all residents.

8. What are the expected benefits and potential unintended consequences to disadvantaged communities of your proposed budget changes?

- a. What analysis did you do to determine the expected benefits and potential unintended consequences?
- b. What will your department do to mitigate unintended consequences resulting from your proposed budget changes?
- c. What are the demographic impacts of any fines and fees assessed by your department? Are there disproportionate impacts on any particular groups?

The Director's Office budget remains stable and continues to operate without a direct impact on the County tax levy. While this stability minimizes immediate effects on disadvantaged communities, broader fiscal pressures—particularly those affecting the Milwaukee County Transit System (MCTS)—pose potential long-term risks. Transit-dependent populations, including low-income residents, older adults, people with disabilities, and communities of color, would be most affected if service reductions or fare increases become necessary due to the projected fiscal cliff.

To understand these risks, the Director's Office reviews demographic and ridership data, Title VI equity analyses, and community feedback. This includes census tract-level information, route-level ridership patterns, and input gathered through public engagement. The analysis focuses on how changes to transit service, fare structures, or infrastructure investments may affect access to employment, education, and healthcare for disadvantaged communities.

MCDOT's mitigation efforts center on proactive advocacy for sustainable transit funding, prioritizing equity in service planning, and maintaining open communication with residents and community partners. The department also works with regional and state policymakers to pursue long-term funding solutions that protect transit-dependent populations. Internally, divisions continue to engage communities—particularly those in underserved neighborhoods—to identify priority areas for infrastructure improvements, safety enhancements, and accessibility upgrades.

STRATEGIC FOCUS AREA 3: INVEST IN EQUITY

9. If your department were to receive some additional funding for addressing equity, what specific strategic plan priority would you address, what would be the project/activity and intended outcome, and how much would it cost?

If additional equity-focused funding were available, the Director's Office would prioritize expanding community outreach and engagement to strengthen relationships with residents—especially those in historically underserved neighborhoods. Enhanced outreach would allow MCDOT to better understand community needs, improve awareness of transportation services, and ensure that residents have meaningful opportunities to participate in planning and decision-making.

Additional funding would support expanded engagement across more municipalities and community organizations, along with the development of accessible educational materials and targeted communication efforts. The intended outcome is a more informed and engaged public, improved trust in County transportation programs, and more equitable service delivery shaped by the voices of those most affected by transportation challenges.

10. What is your department doing to dismantle barriers to diverse and inclusive communities, including meeting multilingual needs, accessibility barriers, food apartheid, financial empowerment or other factors that impact the stability and wellbeing of people in Milwaukee County?

In 2027, the Director's Office continues to prioritize removing communication and accessibility barriers to ensure all residents can meaningfully engage with Milwaukee County's transportation system. A core focus remains on exceeding Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) standards by supporting accessible facilities, transit vehicles, and pedestrian routes, and by ensuring that individuals with mobility, visual, hearing, or other disabilities can safely and independently use County transportation services. Outreach efforts also continue to include events and engagement opportunities in underserved communities to improve awareness of available resources.

Community Engagement Frameworks

APPENDIX A GLOSSARY

Communities of color: In the context of the Milwaukee County Racial Equity Budget Tool, the term communities of color is interchangeable with Black and Brown communities and inclusive of all non-white populations of color.

Historically marginalized communities: A collective term for referencing communities that have historically experienced inequities where they learn, live, and work that were/are not optimal due to disenfranchisement, disinvestment, marginalization, racism, and other systems of oppression.

Diversity: Diversity includes all the ways in which people differ, and it encompasses all the different characteristics that make one individual or group different from another. It is all-inclusive and recognizes everyone and every group as part of the diversity that should be valued. A broad definition includes not only race, ethnicity, and gender — the groups that most often come to mind when the term “diversity” is used — but also age, national origin, religion, disability, sexual orientation, socioeconomic status, education, marital status, language, and physical appearance. It also involves different ideas, perspectives, and values.

Diverse group: As it relates to question 5, an intentional effort to include individuals from different racial, ethnic, gender, and social backgrounds proportionate to the diversity of the department.

Economic data: Numerical data collected based on service delivery criteria determined by departments.

Equity: The just, fair, and impartial treatment, acceptance, or behavior of people without favoritism or discrimination. Equity means righting wrongs, doing what’s right, and giving people what they need to thrive, which is different from equality, which means everyone gets the same thing regardless of circumstance or need.

Food Apartheid: Inequity in the food system on the basis of race, class, and geography that are the result of discriminatory planning and policy decisions.

Frontline employees: A grouping of Milwaukee County employees that serves as the initial point of contact for service users or a range of employees from all levels of the workforce with emphasis on the inclusion of direct service rendering staff.

Inclusion: Assurance that the culture, values, and opinions of individuals and groups are represented in the decision-making processes.

Inclusive workforce: A workplace environment that recognizes the contributions of all employees, while valuing their social status, race, gender, or other demographic classifications.

Key stakeholders: Both internal and external individuals, agencies, or organizations who participate in the planning, development, implementation and decision-making process of an activity, process, or service delivery. (AMOP: Key stakeholders are service users, the workforce, partners, governing boards, donors, suppliers, taxpayers, regulatory bodies, policy makers, funders, and local and professional communities.)

Multilingual needs: The ability of Milwaukee County departments to address linguistic needs for all service users through staffing, documentation, and other communication platforms.

Professional advancement: Opportunities for staff to build their capacity and ascend or pursue lateral movement to further advance their career trajectory.

Racial data: Demographic data collected by Milwaukee County departments that identifies the race/ethnicity of service recipients.

Racial equity: The just and fair inclusion of all people in society, regardless of their race/ethnicity, with unfettered ability to participate, prosper, and reach their full potential. Racial equity is achieved when race no longer determines one’s health and socioeconomic outcomes and when everyone has what they need to thrive and decide what’s best for themselves, their families, and their communities, no matter where they live.

Service user: Current or potential user of Milwaukee County services.

Unintended consequences: Outcomes of a purposeful action that are not intended or foreseen.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

PURPOSE

1) What is the purpose of using this tool?

The Racial Equity Budget Tool (REBT) has many intended purposes:

- It is about making an intentional connection between the strategic plan and our budget. We cannot sufficiently change our institution if we do not think critically about how and what we are spending money on.
- Whether we are making investments or disinvestments, we must do so with racial equity as the key guiding principle to those important decisions.
- It is meant to spur conversation on topics related to the strategic focus areas among department leaders and employees so we are all challenging ourselves to think critically about our efforts to advance the vision.
- This tool is an opportunity to baseline departmental efforts to make informed enterprise-wide decisions.

These are only some of the many answers to why we are using a tool to assess budget decisions.

2) What other jurisdictions have used a racial equity budget tool? Where did the budget tool questions come from?

Milwaukee County's REBT builds on the success of other jurisdictions in implementing a budget tool. Jurisdictions Milwaukee County looked to for guidance include the City of Seattle, the City of Portland (Ore.), King County (Wash.), and the City of San Antonio. Resources from the Government Alliance on Race and Equity (GARE) were also used. The questions are largely framed around Milwaukee County's strategic plan.

3) How does this tool work when departments must make budget cuts year over year? What is the point of doing this when departments don't have a lot of latitude about what disinvestments to make?

Milwaukee County's structural deficit and budget challenges are no secret. However, Milwaukee County still has an annual budget of over $1 billion. Whether the County is making disinvestments or investments, those decisions must be made with racial equity at the forefront of decision-makers' minds. Departments should think critically about their current assumptions and spending versus shifting investments to address root-causes of inequities.

COMPLETING THE TOOL

4) Are there right answers to the questions?

Responses to this tool will inform our future action to see where Milwaukee County can improve on the path to health and racial equity. There are no right answers to the questions, and each department is starting in a different place, serves different people with different needs, and faces a different set of barriers and opportunities. While there are no right answers, the information provided in the tool will be used for decision making throughout the budget process and will be available to the public. Therefore, answers should be robust, defensible, and easy to understand. Your department's answer may look very different than another department's answer and that is okay as long as the answers address the question.

5) What if there are inequities to other groups other than racial groups? Should we be talking about those inequities in our analysis?

Yes! Milwaukee County is race forward, but not race exclusive. If there are other inequities identified in your analysis, please include them.

6) Does every department complete one tool, or is it one tool for each division?

Please submit one tool per department. Responses can be broken down at the division level within your department's tool, as appropriate. All questions should be completed.

7) Who is responsible for filling out the budget tool?

The department head is ultimately responsible for the content in the REBT. It is up to department leadership to determine who in their department is most appropriate to be involved in completing questions in the tool, which will differ from department to department. Likely people to include are department leaders, fiscal staff, and administrative staff.

8) Is this tool supposed to imply that we should be taking actions on each of these items? Are the questions meant to be directives to departments?

A budget is a reflection of priorities. Ultimately, Milwaukee County's budget should reflect our values and advance our vision and strategic plan. However, we acknowledge our organization is on a journey to continuously improve our efforts toward health and racial equity. The REBT is meant to spur conversations among department leaders and staff about what they are and are not able to do in a given budget year to advance the vision. To that end, the tool is not an absolute directive to departments. We fully expect that some departments' answers to some of the questions will be that they are not doing anything this year with an explanation about why that is the case. Looking ahead to future years, departments will be expected to show how their budgets help Milwaukee County make progress toward its vision.

9) How do I use this when my work is statutorily required?

What services Milwaukee County provides is often statutorily required. However, how we do our work usually is not a directive. This tool is meant to challenge us all to think about how to do the enormous part of our work that is within our discretion and control.

10) Is there a standard approach all departments are expected to take to answer the questions?

No. Answer the questions based on the approach your department currently takes on these items.

11) What type of analysis is expected for each of the questions?

It depends on what your department is currently doing in each area. Please use the diverse expertise and experiences of staff in your department to determine the most appropriate way for your department to answer the questions.

12) What part of the budget is this tool being applied to?

The REBT will focus on an equity analysis of decisions for new policies, programs, and plans under consideration, and the department's ongoing commitment to equity. Your department is asked to identify what considerations are considered in the overall budget to maximize equitable outcomes.

USING THE DATA

13) Who will receive the data departments provide in the REBT? Who will be expected to answer questions about the information provided?

Responses to the REBT will be publicly available and will be presented to the County Board. If any decision-makers (e.g., County Executive, County Board Supervisors, department directors) have questions about the information provided in the REBT, the department should be prepared to answer them. We are all partners in Milwaukee County's strategic planning effort to achieve racial equity, and the budget tool is in-part meant to inform and focus conversations around strategic priorities, understanding that not all questions have known answers or solutions.

APPENDIX B

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

14) What if someone questions the analysis, conclusions, or recommendations made in the budget tool?

Like all research and analysis, there will be questions and critiques and we should embrace these important conversations. The work presented in the budget tool should be defensible, but most of these questions do not have a clear right or wrong answer. If someone finds something wrong in the analysis, then we need to fix it. However, if it is a question about the interpretation and meaning of the analysis, then we can make space for different perspectives to find the best path forward with the information we have available.

15) Will the budget tool submissions be scored?

No, the REBT submissions will not be scored. However, they will be made available to the public and reviewed by the County Executive's office, the Office of Equity, the Office of Performance, Strategy and Budget and the County Board.

LOGISTICS

16) When will the budget tool be due?

The REBT is due on July 15 — the same due date as the requested budget.

Commented [SC1]: Update with 2027 Budget Due Date

17) Where do I go if I have questions?

If you understand the question, but have difficulty determining how to answer a question, please first try to problem solve within your department by looping in additional experts (e.g., people leaders, frontline staff, etc.).

If you need assistance understanding what the question is asking, contact your Budget Analyst for assistance.

The Office of Equity should only be contacted on questions related to racial equity components (glossary, concepts, etc.) that are unclear and cannot be addressed by your budget analyst. Send correspondence via email to equityoffice@milwaukeecountywi.gov.

Community Engagement Frameworks & Guidance

Community Engagement connection to the REBT Tool and Budget Alignment

These frameworks help guide users of the REBT tool to think critically about how budget decisions align with the strategic plan and advance racial equity. By applying the continuum, staff can assess whether their fiscal choices reflect appropriate levels of community involvement, ensure that decisions are informed by community priorities, and understand the equity impacts of how resources are allocated. This supports intentional, equity-centered budgeting rooted in community voice and shared responsibility.

Summary of the Community Engagement Frameworks

The Community Engagement Continuum & Breaking Down the Path outlines five levels of engagement—Inform, Consult, Involve, Collaborate, and Share Leadership, supported by practices that build trust and ensure findings are shared transparently. At the early stages, engagement focuses on providing information and gathering feedback through tools like fact sheets, surveys, and town halls. As engagement deepens, community members help shape decisions, co-create solutions, and participate in shared leadership structures such as advisory boards or governing bodies. Across all stages, trust-building, transparency, responsiveness, and partnership are essential for meaningful and equitable involvement.
